Dear Ms. Kathleen Abernathy,

I am writing to you regarding your future decision on the revision of the television ownership rules. You must keep in mind that revising ownership rules will dramatically change the media landscape. If you loosen the rules and further permit the consolidation of media this might create tremendous problems, and if it does, these problems might be next to impossible to fix.

If the ownership rules are overhauled or completely eliminated only a handful of giant companies will take over and control everything we watch on television. I'm sorry to say, but I would not like to have one company influence such a vast array of people including myself. I would like to be an individual and have the right to make the decision of who and what I get influenced by. So, as you see taking away the ownership rules is reminiscent of taking away the television viewer's choice to be an individual and have the power to choose exactly whose voice will be akin to your own.

Thank you for taking the time to read my letter and I genuinely hope that you will take note of the points that I have stated.

Sincerely,
Anastasia Hilinsky
